OUR MINING

Industry is Increasing and Should be Encouraged.

In conversation with O. B. Hollingsworth, Superintendent of the C. V. Division, last week he informed us that there were now fifteen new Coal Mines arranging to connect with this Railway between Corbin and Middlesboro, besides many older mines that have been in operation for some time.

This shows the great activity that is going on now in this coal field, and yet it is only a small amount of what would be done if we only had more railroad facilities.

These mines are all close to the L & N railroad, and throughout the county the coal is as fine and the mines as prolific as they are along this route and only waiting for a railroad to carry the black diamonds to the consumers.

Think what that would mean to Knox county. Now we have perhaps fifteen or twenty mines in operation and with a railroad running through the county from south-west to north-east it would double the output and give employment to double the number of hands, and increasing the value of our lands two fold.

This railroad is badly needed and it is within our power to secure it if proper steps were only taken.

There is hardly a man along the right or way but would willingly sign a contract to deed a right of way if the road would be built. Now why not have the road built and thus improve our county in every way possible.

Think of this farmers and decide to take steps to develop our entire county and get out of it the vast stores of mineral wealth which it contains.

In the District Court of the United States, for the District of Kentucky, in Bankruptcy.

In the matter of Stanfill and Faulkner a Bankrupt.

On this 29th day of April, A. D., 1905, on considering the petition of the aforesaid bankrupt for discharge, filed on the 29th day of April, A. D., 1905, it is ordered by the court that a hearing be had upon the same on the 9th day of May, A. D., 1905, before said court at Covington in said district at 10 o'clock, in the forenoon, or as near thereto as practicable, and that notice thereof be published in the Mountain Advocate, a newspaper printed in said district, and that all known creditors and other persons in interest may appear at said time and place and show cause, if any they have, why the prayer of said petitioner should not be granted.

Witness the Honorable A. M. J. Cochran, Judge of said Court, and the seal thereof, at London in said district, on the 29th day of April A. D., 1905.

JOS. C. FUNNILL, Clerk.
By W. O. CLARK, D. C.

ON PRICES.

The prices on crude oil have again been lowered, the lighter grade, which takes in the production of this county, being reduced two cents per barrel, bringing the price down to 76 cents per barrel. As a consequence of the continued reductions production all over the Kentucky fields is falling below the standard.

ARTICLE

Last Week on Proposed Canning Factory Completed.

A number of our citizens have spoken to us in complimentary terms concerning the article last week which appeared in this paper concerning the proposition to establish a canning factory here.

Some have even wondered that it had not been thought of before and the plan taken up by some enterprising man.

With a factory here, and a cold storage connected with it, the vegetables brought in could be kept for an indefinite time as fresh as when first pulled, and by this means the plant would be able to run the entire year.

This is the proposition that every farmer is interested in, and would help to patronize. Besides it would furnish employment for a large number of persons here in town, which means a great deal to the town.

Now as to location there are a number of places which can be secured and one man has authorized us to say that he has lots to spare for any public enterprise, or factory that will proceed to operate in our town. What more could be asked.

Let those desiring to secure a site apply to this office and we will give the name of the gentleman who makes the liberal proposition. Let's have a factory.

Mr. and Mrs. Lock Entertain.

The largest reception given in this city for several moons, was the celebration last Saturday evening at Lock haven, the occasion being the anniversary of Mr. Wm. Lock, Cashier of the First National Bank.

Invitations were issued to a large circle of the married folks, and about seven five or more were present, and an enjoyable evening spent.

Refreshments consisting of ices and cakes were served. The color scheme being pink and white.

Mr. Lock's anniversary came on Sunday, but the plan to celebrate the occasion on Saturday evening was carried out by dating the invitation Saturday evening, April 30, instead of the true date April 29.

All present were delighted with the hospitality of the Host and Hostess and wish for Mr. Lock many more anniversaries to be enjoyed by himself and his estimable wife.

Institute Notes.

Commencement at Institute next week.

Don't miss Perryman's lecture. The Suffern-Putnam recital will entertain you. Miss Ethel Putnam, of New York City, will sing. She is a scholar of rare musical talent. Prof. Suffern is noted for his splendid voice and exceeding plainness of articulation. Other members of the troupe will be entertaining.

Final examinations will be held next Monday and Tuesday.

Prof. Warren has had the campus cleared off and the front looks much nicer and cleaner.

Mr. George Rhodes entered school a few days ago; he is preparing to teach.

The Literary Society met last Friday for the last time this year. There were many present. An entertaining feature of the program was, "Opinions" by the members of the society as to who is the greatest man living.

Mrs. Warren, Prof. Warren's mother, visited our class-rooms last Tuesday.

Another Letter From Mr. E. G. Asher, of Pineville.

DEAR SIR:—I have been informed by a friend that L. Robertson, editor of the Pineville Herald, is going to deny having made the statement that I charged him with making, in reference to Caleb Powers. When he does this he will only draw the net closer about his deceitful soul. I fully realize that all you have to do with a fellow like yo editor of the Pineville Herald is to just simply turn him loose without a guard and he will begin butting and keep on butting until he produces concussion of the brain, if that be possible.

I will not attempt to answer Mr. Robertson's denial until I have a chance to see it in print. You will hear from me next week with a statement backed up by affidavits of good men who were present and heard the wicked statement uttered from the lips of him who has proven himself a traitor to those good people at Campbell, Knox county, who so cheerfully furnished him with meat and bread when indeed he needed it. Signed,
E. G. ASHER.

Industrial California.

California is one of the most remarkable and fascinating states on the map.

California was set down on the Atlantic coast and cut to fit, it would hide from view Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Massachusetts, Connecticut, Rhode Island, New York, New Jersey, Maryland and all of Virginia east of the mountains. If just dropped down on the Atlantic Coast its northern line would fall upon Maine, where it touches salt water farthest north, while its southern line will be cut off a Cape Hatteras, or if Mt. Snasta, that great snow-capped peak of California, overlook New York City, then San Diego, that wonderful city on the southern boundary of California, would be near neighbor of St. Augustine, Fla.

Between the sea and the mountains in California the valleys are kept in a climate warmed by the sun, tempered by the Pacific stream and cooled by the snow caps of the Sierra Nevada range. This makes a climate twelve months in the year (three hundred and sixty days) well nigh ideal.

California is an empire in itself, has a climate all its own and a productiveness of soil that equals the best sections of the United States, the four great valleys—Sacramento, San Joaquin, Santa Clara and the Citrus Belt. These sections have only just been scratched and the productiveness of the soil is only just beginning to be known.

California is one of the greatest fruit sections in the world, and no other section of the United States can possibly compete with California oranges, lemons, raisins, asparagus, apricots, pears and the wines, for in point of quality these products are peerless, more luxurious in production and more delicious in flavor than those raised (except in hot houses) in any other section of the United States.

But there are many other products. For example, English walnuts, prunes, olives and the white Smyrna fig, all of which hold the attention of commerce as the coming great contributor to domestic and foreign markets.

When California is spoken of every one considers the state as synonymous with delicious fruits and beautiful flowers. But the wise ones who look from the "tree top" are beginning to appreciate the value of California as the great producer of the common products, such as alfalfa, five crops a year, two tons to the acre, $15 the average price per ton. These are the facts that appeal to the husbandmen. Fancy farming is productive of great profit, but plain, every day, old-fashioned farming in California brings the round returns in dollars and cents for every day labor and the expenditure of a limited capital. Ten acres of California land will produce in baled alfalfa $1,500 a year gross, at a cost of labor and interest on the investment of not to exceed $300, leaving a net profit of $1,200 to the man who is willing to appreciate the needs and demands of that section of the country.

There is in California an opportunity for every man in every walk of life, whether professional, commercial, mechanic, common laborer or farmer, and the great ranges which have hitherto been controlled by large capital interests are being divided now into forty and eighty acre tracts, upon which a man can pay as small a sum as $100 down and long, easy terms to suit for the balance. These are the things that will make men who are fighting the cold of the winter and the heat of the summer rejoice that there is a place for his family and his energies where he can work with a competence and gain a foothold that will bring him not only a livelihood, but a comfortable life income.

One of the remarkable things about California to every person who lives in the East, is that in this state there is no desire on the part of either the man or his family to return to his original home in the East.

Why? Because the heat of the summer and the severe cold of the winter in the East both retard the best efforts and sap the energies of the man and woman alike, and competition is not apparent in California as it is in the East, which makes a man more independent, and the mild winters and the comfortable summers give to every member of his family the best opportunity to make use of time and thought for hand and brain.

The most remarkable feature of California climate is its sameness, north and south. Heat and cold are a matter of altitude, not latitude. Oranges grow to perfection in Riverside; so do they in the upper Sacramento Valley, over five hundred miles north. In foothills, valleys and along the coast wild flowers (and cultivated flowers, too) bloom the length of California in midwinter.

Caleb Powers and James Howard were visited last Sunday in Louisville by Bishop C. C. McCabe, of Philadelphia, and Bishop H. W. Warren, of Denver. The eminent divines remained for half an hour in conversation and attended services in the jail. Bishop Warren was the Bishop who presided at the conference here last September.

WILL WE BUILD A Water-Works Plant in the City of Harboursville?

This question is one that has been frequently discussed through these columns, and yet we have not succeeded in getting the proper steps taken to start the work of putting in a plant.

Union College is now figuring on putting in a private water-works system, but if a public plant was installed here this institution would be a liberal patron.

There are other individuals who have become weary of waiting for the spirit to move some of our old "moss backs" and are now planning to put in private water plants.

Let's not delay longer; let's start the water-works plant at once. There are a sufficient number of patrons who will subscribe for from two to four or five faucets to make it a paying proposition, and the location for the reservoir can be secured free, so that expense can be saved and the franchise will only cost a nominal sum, and the only cost will be the expense of material and placing the same in position. The formation of the soil here would make the work of laying mains an easy task. So we find it would cost much less to install a plant here than in many other places. Let's have a new water-works plant at once.

An Unique Proposition.

We have been told by some that they cannot afford to take the local paper, that they cannot spare the money, etc. To all such we will make the following unique proposition:

To any lady who will name one of her hens THE ADVOCATE, and when that hen takes it into her head to set, if the lady will place under the said hen the unlucky number 13 good fresh eggs and allow THE ADVOCATE hen to do the rest, and when the brood is hatched, and are large enough to run about, either bring or send to this office THE ADVOCATE hen and her brood of chicks hatched from the unlucky 13 eggs, no matter whether one or a dozen, we will enter the name of the donor upon our mailing list and send THE ADVOCATE for a full year. Now here is a unique opportunity to pay for your home paper. How many will try the experiment?

Powers Trial Begins July 10.

An order has been made setting the case of Caleb Powers for trial at Georgetown on July 10th. Defendant offered to file a petition to have the case transferred to the Federal court of the Eastern District of Ky.

ADAPTABILITY OF THE SOUTH FOR LIVE STOCK.

As a rule, man's endeavor to accumulate wealth is along the line that promises the greatest returns for the least labor, and his success is measured largely, aside from his individual effort, by the favorable or unfavorable conditions that surround him.
If climate, soil, the natural growth of grasses and forage crops of all kinds are essential in growing, economically and successfully, all classes of live stock, the South is peculiarly adapted for this purpose as it is for growing cotton and sugar cane. That it is the natural home of all the improved breeds of our domestic animals was evidenced in the fact that the earliest importations into this country of the improved breeds of our domestic animals were made by the farmers in the South. They imported in old sailing vessels that required weeks and sometimes months to make the trip from Europe into our Southern ports. Notwithstanding the losses were enormous, yet the increased value of this blood on the native stock made it a most profitable business.
The first thoroughbred horses were imported by the South; the first herd of beef cattle, Shorthorns, were bought and owned by the Southern farmers; the first improved breeds of swine, the Berkshire and the old Essex tribe, were introduced into this country by the Southern farmers. Perhaps New York can claim the distinction of importing the first improved breeds of sheep, but it was only a few years later that the Merino blood in Spain was bought and imported into the South, and from this blood came the fleece that in 1840-50 at the great World's Fair in London won over the flocks of the world the grand medal as the best grade of wool. From the loins of these imported animals and their descendants in the South was laid the foundation of the magnificent stature, the great live stock interest of the West and Southwest, as it stands to-day, and yet the South, that portion of it east of the Mississippi, is poorer in proportion to population than any section of the United States. Why is this?
Previous to the civil war the South was purely an agricultural section, making a specialty of such crops as were most profitable in certain localities, such as cotton, sugar, rice, etc., but even where these crops were the principle staples, the live stock, though grown only to a limited extent, were all strongly infused with the good blood that predominated in other localities. When the war closed the South was a financial wreck, stripped of all visible wealth except her climate, her soil and a people whose courage no disaster or misfortune could subdue. Slowly but surely they began to rebuild their shattered fortunes.
Past experience had shown the remarkable adaptability of the South to growing all improved breeds of live stock and very naturally as fast as they were able to do so, investments were made in thoroughbred cattle, sheep, hogs and horses, and again the South became the breeding ground and the nursery from which other less favored sections of the country drew their supplies of thoroughbred blood. But the South was rapidly changing from a purely agricultural section to one of manufactures. The limitless wealth of our coal and iron ore, our hardwood forests and our phosphate beds were discovered; manufacturers sprung up as if by magic throughout the land, fortunes were made in a few years that had required a life-time to accumulate previous to the war. It was a temptation few could resist—money that had heretofore been invested in thoroughbred stock, was turned in mining or manufacturing stocks, the grass and was turned over by the pick and shovel to make room for the foundation of a manufacturing building, and the old breeders of fine stock saw the shining coats and fat sides of the last of their thoroughbreds pass from them forever thro' the sale ring, money they brought to be invested in more hazardous enterprises that promised greater returns.

It is not the purpose of this article to follow the fortunes of those who made this change. A few made fortunes, many made failures, but the detriment to the live stock interest of the South was incalculable. But a reaction is at hand. The tidal wave that once carried the thoroughbred stock of the South on its crest, is coming in again, year by year the demand for better stock is increasing. Unfortunately the section that once suffered—the West and Southwest—with foundation stock is now barren and with but few exceptions, the farmer must look abroad for good blood.
In this connection it is safe to say that history will repeat itself, and the farmers of the Middle and Southeastern States first put themselves in a position to supply the inevitable demand for good stock, that is as sure to come as the laws of supply and demand will exist, will be the one to reap the greatest rewards.
—Southern Agriculturalist.

PROPOSED NEW STATES.
Two new schemes for carving new states out of old ones are being mooted. The inhabitants of South-eastern Kentucky, Southwestern Virginia and Northeastern Tennessee are a remarkably homogeneous people. They are almost all Republicans, whereas the other inhabitants of these states are mainly Democrats. They are mountaineers. They have the same manners and customs, the same sympathies and antipathies. They are alike in standing just where their ancestors stood a century ago, while the rest of the nation has moved on. Sentiment in favor of the union of the people of the mountain districts into a separate state, to be called Franklin, has sprung up among them, and their Representatives in Congress have prepared a bill having that object.
The people of western Pennsylvania, and especially those of Pittsburgh, have got tired, they say, of being dominated by the people of eastern Pennsylvania, and especially those of Philadelphia. "There is a natural division, a trade division, and a division in that community of interests that ought to exist in every state that separates Pennsylvania," says the Pittsburgh Leader, "and the line of it is the watershed of the Allegheny mountains." The rule of eastern Pennsylvania and Philadelphia has been selfish and corrupt. Therefore the western Pennsylvanians pray to be released from the bonds by which the two sections are united and to be permitted to set up for themselves as the state of Allegheny.
Once rid of their mountaineers, Virginia, Kentucky and Tennessee would be as safely Democratic as Mississippi. But state pride is likely to influence the Democrats of these states more than the prospect of party advantage. It has been many years since a state voluntarily parted from any of its territory; since a state of Franklin cannot be created without the consent of each of the states out of which it is proposed to make it, Franklin will probably remain unborn. The state of Allegheny is equally unlikely to come into existence. Should the western Pennsylvanians once command votes enough to give them control of the state legislature and secure the assent of Pennsylvania to division they would not wish to divide. They would use their majority to run the whole state.—Chicago Daily Tribune of April 26, 1905.

Our observation has been, that every time, just before Circuit Court convenes here, some of the hands are warned in time, and a few shovels of loose dirt is thrown into the mud holes along the county roads and they are reported being worked.
That is not working the road—by any means, and the men who would go over the roads and do such work and then come in and say they had worked the road, should be indicted for failure to work them, and prosecuted for lying.
We had occasion to drive out over the Little Richmond road a few days ago, and to say the roads here had not improved. They were horrible. In places the hubs of the buggy would roll in the mud as the horse struggled to pull through the slush and mire. If there was no remedy we would not say a word, but these roads can be fixed, we hope they will be.
All that is necessary is the proper location of the road-hubs and the proper drainage will make good roads all through our country.
We have repeatedly urged upon our people to put forth an effort to secure another railroad for Knox County, and unless steps are taken soon it will be forever too late.
We have sounded the alarm, will the people stand blank and laugh, or will they arouse to action?
The time is fast approaching when a railroad will be built connecting Jellico Tenn. with some point in Kentucky, in all probability Beattyville; now the route of this road should be through Barbourville and Knox county, but there is a possibility of its being built through Bell county, and the route that shows the most interest and offers the greatest inducements will be the one benefited by this new road. Therefore, we should arouse to action and take steps to have the road built without delay. It means millions of dollars to this county and this opportunity lost all is lost and the last chance of a lifetime to secure a competing railroad will have passed from us.
Let's secure the right of way and have the road chartered and begin the work. This is the only way to secure rates for our home products, so that we can compete with the outside world and we should not miss the opportunity.

THE WOMEN.

A grand old site in her great arm chair, smiling sweet in the soft spring air.

Through the latticed, blue-shadowed pane she looks to the orchard beyond the lane.

And she catches the gleam of a woman's dress.

As if flutter about in the wind's caress.

"That child is gliding as the day is long—

Her lover is coming, her life's a song."

Up from the orchard's flowery bloom.

Fleets fragrance faint to the darkening room.

Where grandma dreams, till a tender grace

And a softer light steal into her face.

For once again she is young and fair,

And twining roses in her hair.

The last faint glimpse of day has died.

Stars tremble out of the purple sky.

For down fits up the garden path,

And a faint gleam of grandma's white.

With rounded cheeks and flying hair

She twines down by the old arm chair.

"Grandma, Dick says, my wee-wee—I—"

The filtering voice grows strangely shy.

But grandma, presses the little hand:

"Yes, my dearie, I understand!

He may have you, darling." Not all in vain,

Old grandma knows she was a girl again!

Who gently twisted a shining curl:

"Ah, me! the philosophy of a girl!

Take the world's treasure—its richest, best,

And love will outweigh all the rest!"

And through the emerald the moonlight

Sheds on two heads—one gray, one gold.

"There is dew in one flower and not in another," said Beecher, "because one opens its cup and takes it, while the other closes itself and the drops run off."

IT has been said that from the same materials one builds palaces, another hovels; one warehouses, another villas; bricks and mortar or mortar and bricks until the architect makes them something else. The block of granite which was an obstacle in the path of the weak legion was a stepping stone in the pathway of the resolute. The difficulties which dishearten one man only stiffen the sinews of another, who looks on them as a sort of mental springboard by which to vault across the gulf of failure on the sure, solid ground of full success.

THE LABORER AND THE HEM.

How often in life we see men who, by their outward appearance, are perfect gentlemen. Men whose lives and characters are blander than the darkest of ink. Men who occupy prominent positions in society simply because they wear fine clothes and has a few dollars in his pocket that he has won in some poker game or inherited from an honest, upright president of some great railroad corporation or the owner of some great merchandise establishment. Yes, he is the coming Lincoln, Vanderbilt or

Edison of the future.

Now note the contrast of these two classes of young men. Which class do you belong to? Are you the one whose life is one of busy activity at work, or are you one of those perpetual loafers whose only occupation is to sit around on the corners and whistle in a loafing match and curse

the government because it does not give you a pension.

A COLLECTION OF DON'TS.

Don't turn away a child when he comes to you for comfort and sympathy in a childish grievance and then expect him to love you and confide in you when he reaches difficulties of mature life.

Don't let the cares of the workday world absorb all your sweetness and strength. Take time to be young with the children, to romp with them, to rejoice with them, to read with them, to love them.

Don't become careless in your dress.

Adorn yourself for your husband;

give him the happiness of finding a lovely woman, as well as a loving woman and a good housekeeper.

Don't make the mistake of believing that you are too handsome or too ugly to be benefited by careful grooming and dressing.

Don't expect to have a bright and happy home without books, music and friends.

Don't allow your children to be

IN MEMORIAM.

Editor Mountain Advocate.

William Milliner, who died on the first of March, 1905, was born in Anderson county, Tenn., in 1868, and came to this country about eighteen years ago, and was united in marriage to Miss Sarah Stanner, to which union was born a son who preceded him several years, leaving the father and mother to mourn their loss of him, until that dread disease, consumption, took him from the humble home to join his little son in the City of the Dead, leaving his wife, Sarah, to mourn her loss, for she has our deepest sympathy.

Mr. Milliner was for a number of years an active member of the Baptist church at Harboursville, and often prayed in public, but became cold and retrograded from the faith, but when he came to realize his condition and that he must soon pass into the beyond, he called his wife and said to her let us erect again the family altar and sing and pray as we used to do, which they did, and God honored this offering by coming in demonstrating His power, enabling to shout and praise His holy name, and assuring his wife that he was prepared and ready to go. And after suffering for several weeks he fell asleep calmly in the arms of death. Oh, how good God is, that where friends forsake and fall, unite them. As a loving father, he comes to cherish us with his spirit, and we can say with the Psalmist, though I walk through the valley and shadow of death I will fear no evil, for thy rod and staff comfort me and surely I shall dwell in the house of the Lord forever.

What a friend we have in Jesus, All our sins and griefs to bear: What a privilege to carry Everything to God in prayer.

He was laid to rest in the burying ground at William Golden's.

D. McD.

MY DEAR SIR:—In last week's issue of your valuable paper I noticed the announcement of the death of friend and brother Ben F. Golden, for which we are very thankful. All was truth as you gave it, except he was not buried in the Harboursville burying ground as his Uncle Wm. Golden's on the California branch of Richmond creek, Knox county, Ky., about 1-1/4 miles from Harboursville. The funeral services were conducted by Rev. D. McDonald. He leaves a wife and three small children to mourn their loss as well as a host of friends and relatives.

EXCEPTIONAL OPPORTUNITY

For Training in Mechanical Drawing, Mechanical Arts and Mechanical Engineering in Summer Courses.

The technical courses of instruction in our American colleges have been great factors in the material development of this country. No field at the present time, as that presented by the various engineering professions.

In order for a young man to equip himself as a professional engineer, most courses of study offered, are four years long, and require comprehensive attainments for admission. Many young men of pronounced mechanical skill have been denied the privilege of a thorough technical education on account of a lack of previous training.

Many opportunities for a life of usefulness, with possibilities of ultimate substantial advancement, are offered in the large manufacturing establishments to those young men who have a practical working knowledge of mechanical drawing and shop work, but who have completed the full college course.

The Summer School in Mechanic Arts of the State College of Kentucky, Lexington, Ky., was organized for the purpose of giving to any man a special course of work in mechanical drawing, shop work, dynamo and engine testing and any branch pertaining to mechanical and electrical engineering.

For young boys courses in manual training in mechanical drawing have been arranged, such as are presented in the manual training high schools throughout the country. For more advanced students, the work in mechanical drawing is more of the nature of machine design, while for practical mechanics special courses of instruction are offered in mechanical drawing, machine design and problems relating to the transmission of power.

The school will begin Thursday, June 8th, and continue for a period ten weeks. The hours of work will be from 8 a. m. to 5 p. m. For those who are unable to attend during the day, special night courses have been arranged, giving the same lines of work that are presented to the day classes.

It is possible for a man during these ten weeks in the Summer School to acquire a working knowledge of mechanical drawing and allied subjects, so that he can take up the simpler work in an architect's or engineer's office, or in the drafting room of a machine building establishment. There is a marked demand for men who are able to take up intelligently the various mechanical problems relating to manufacturing in its many phases; and a rapid introduction of electric railways throughout the country has created many opportunities for young men versed in the elementary principles of mechanics.

The Summer School is of special advantage to young boys, who contemplate eventually a full engineering course. A start made in shop work and drawing before entering the university course in engineering is of great advantage.

Throughout the regular college term at State College, it is impossible to provide special instruction on account of the large number of students. It is deemed important, however, that opportunities offered should be presented to those persons who have not been fortunate in securing a broad foundation for the college course, and who would be much benefitted by special courses in mathematics and subjects that are strictly technical.

No entrance examination is held, except such tests as may be required to determine the character of work that should be given each individual student. Every one entering the school is dealt with as an individual member, and work is provided for him, which can be carried on with profit. Manual training has a distinct educational value, as well as a commercial one. The ability to make and interpret drawings, and to carry on mechanical processes, cannot be over estimated. No matter what may be a man's work in life, his specific skill in any mechanical work has great value.

The equipment at the State College for mechanical engineering work is one of the best in the southwest, and opportunities are being provided by the State Institution for lines of instruction in technical subjects that no doubt will be taken advantage of by many young men in the commonwealth.

The Summer School attracts men from all parts of the country, who come here largely from manufacturing communities. Our young men should certainly take advantage of a situation which gives them superior training in mechanical processes.

State News.

Chas. J. Bronston, of Lexington, has been retained by the Commonwealth to assist in the prosecution of Caleb Powers in the next trial at Georgetown.

Ex-Governor Yates, of Illinois, has been sworn in as an attorney at the Scott county bar, and will assist in defending Mr. Powers in his next trial.

The date for holding the Annual Conference of the Kentucky Methodist Episcopal church at Lexington has been fixed for September 28. Bishop D. A. Goodsell, of Boston, Mass, will preside.

The Bishops of the two branches of the Methodist church held their first joint meeting since the split in the church in 1844, in Louisville last week. The meeting was largely attended, and good feeling prevailed, and a union of the two branches was discussed.

In the Scott Circuit Court at Georgetown, last Monday, on motion of Commonwealth's Attorney R. B. Franklin, Judge Robert L. Stout entered an order instructing the Sheriff of Scott county to bring Caleb Powers from Louisville that he might be in court Wednesday morning in order that the mandate of the court of Appeals reversing the verdict of the low court and ordering a new trial may be read in his presence.
